Ufton Fields

Ufton Fields is a small and picturesque rural village situated approximately five miles south-east of Leamington Spa and two miles west of Southam. The village enjoys an elevated position with attractive views across the surrounding Warwickshire countryside and retains a peaceful, traditional village character.

The village is centred around the historic parish church and the popular White Hart country pub, while the renowned Ufton Fields Nature Reserve provides an exceptional amenity for walking, wildlife and enjoying the surrounding countryside. The 78-acre Site of Special Scientific Interest features woodland, grassland, pools and marshland, and is particularly noted for its wildflowers and wildlife.

Ufton offers an appealing combination of rural living and accessibility, with Leamington Spa, Southam and Warwick all within easy reach, together with convenient access to the wider Midlands via the A425 and M40. The village is particularly attractive to those seeking a peaceful countryside setting while remaining within easy reach of nearby towns and amenities.
