Old Town Kenilworth is arguably the town's most distinctive and sought-after setting, combining history, character and an exceptional quality of life. Centred around the historic Old High Street, the area is surrounded by some of Kenilworth's most recognisable landmarks, including the magnificent Kenilworth Castle and the beautiful Abbey Fields, providing an extraordinary backdrop to everyday life.

The Old High Street itself offers a wonderful blend of independent shops, cafés, restaurants, traditional pubs and local businesses, creating a genuine sense of community and making it possible to enjoy much of what the town has to offer without relying on the car.

The surrounding streets are characterised by attractive period architecture, mature gardens and a wealth of historic buildings, many of which form part of Kenilworth's Conservation Area. The Abbey Fields provide an outstanding open space for walking, exercising and enjoying the outdoors, whilst the Castle and historic heart of the town give the area a unique sense of place.

Heritage Summary Of 42 High Street, Kenilworth

42 High Street forms part of a pair of historic buildings listed together as 40 & 42 High Street (Grade II). The listing notes "late C18 alterations to earlier timber-frame", meaning the property incorporates an older timber-framed structure, likely dating from the 17th or early-mid 18th century, with Georgian-period updates made in the late 1700s.

This blend of early timber construction and later Georgian detailing is typical of Kenilworth's historic High Street, where many buildings evolved over centuries while retaining their original character. The property sits within the Kenilworth Conservation Area, an attractive historic setting protected to preserve the architectural charm and streetscape of the old town.

Today, 42 High Street stands as a fine example of Kenilworth's layered architectural history — a building with genuine period integrity.
